

Part VI

Why are you following me around with a bowl?

Let me tell you something else that may help you to understand how these microbe-miracles work, and how important they are. Have you ever observed your dog eating another dog's puke or poop and were like "Eew gross poochie, I hope you don't plan on licking my face any time soon!"? Well guess what folks... dogs don't do this because they're gross and hungry. Dogs actually inherently do this to "diversify" the good-bacteria in their gut!(HOLY SICK-SENSE BATMAN!) It helps them to maintain a healthy digestive system, which helps them to maintain a healthy immune system. Isn't nature fascinating? Gross sometimes, but fascinating.

Doctors and scientists are only just recently beginning to realize this, and even started healing certain gastrointestinal and digestive illnesses with new procedures like "Fecal Transplants" if you can believe that shite! If you're unfamiliar with that procedure, I'm not surprised. It's still fairly new, but it's real! Most are preformed by swallowing a dozen pills with the fecal-matter from a super-healthy person inside gelatin capsules... and with very promising results I might add.(HOLY CHOCOLATE-COATING BATMAN!)

Lol, can you imagine being that patient? "Excuse me Doc, but I don't think I heard you right... you want me to swallow what? A turd pill? What's next Doc, ya gonna put leaches on my neck or give me a lobotomy? Listen here Doc... you no lobotomy, I no lobota you! You can take those turd-pills and shove them right back where you got them! What is this the Dark Ages? C'mon Honey we're leaving. Let's leave the Doc to his unsanitary practices..."

That Chinese medicine lemme tell ya, they sure do know their
